

Jane Moraa Matara

Chief

Office of the President, Kenya

The focus of my work is guided by the following values; dedication, integrity and good governance, courtesy and diplomacy, efficiency, innovativeness, customer focus more particularly to common ‘mwsananchi’ (man), promotion and respect for human and environmental rights, teamwork and patriotism of my country so as to provide strategic leadership, policy direction, a secure environment and set the agenda for socio-economic and political development of our people.

The main goals of my organization are the coordination of development programmes and state functions, maintenance of law and order, prevention and detection of crime, dissemination and interpretation of government policies, peace-building and conflict resolution at the grassroots levels, the promotion of statehood and nationhood, and championing the campaign against drug and substance abuse.

“I was inspired by a lecturer who taught me at NISPED (Israel), who spoke so well about the Coady and the knowledge it offers to the people of the world and how it has changed so many to change livelihoods. It will definitely impact on my ways of looking at things, particularly to social change and to accelerate my commitment to have more women trained in the village to change their attitudes.”
