

“I came to the Coady Institute to learn from the experience of the other participants, to share my knowledge and also to teach and be taught. What we need is access to information and education; with access to information and education, we can give people wings to fly out of poverty, disease and ignorance.”

Apuoyo Elijah Omolo

Development Coordinator

Give Us Wings, Kenya

I work with the organization’s staff teams on the ground, in both Kenya and Uganda. I also coordinate the external organizations and the target communities so that they can work together collectively to achieve the overall goal in the two locations. I hold frequent meetings with the staff on the ground to review our mid-term goals for the projects.

I listen and to pay attention to the staff so that we can all find solutions to the problems that might arise while striving to reach our overall goals. Lastly, I relay the feed back to both our head office and our development partners.

The main goal of my organization is the eradication of poverty. Give us Wings funds community development projects and provides financial assistance and training. This transformative approach aims to empower individuals and give them the skills to address their long term economic needs in the areas of health, education and clean drinking water.
