

I came to Coady to get a deeper understanding of the concepts of transformation and sustainable development, and to acquire empowering skills and sharpen my tools of engagement.

Abu Augustus Brima

Executive Director

Network Movement for Justice and Development (NMJD), Sierra Leone

The focus of my work as an institutional leader is to provide leadership and to facilitate strategic direction setting in an inclusive and empowering way. More specifically, I facilitate strategic planning processes, serve as a role model, provide coaching to senior management team members and create linkages and partnerships with stakeholders.

The main goal of NMJD is to contribute to the transformation of political and economic governance so that citizens have justice and improved living standards. Key areas of engagement are advocating for the responsible, environmentally friendly and beneficial natural resource exploitation; livelihoods promotion; accountable governance; youth empowerment and conflict transformation at both local/community and national levels. Organizational development and civil society strengthening are two key strategies that are employed.
