

I came to Coady to improve on my skills so I can help the underprivileged in my community have a voice in society. They do it through social, political and economic welfare so they too can be represented in development ideas.

Social Worker

Action to Positive Change on Persons with Disabilities, Uganda

I do mobilization work in my community. Using arts and crafts, I teach students to help them express their feelings in class. I do followups with students who need special care through home visits, and advise parents accordingly. I may refer the student to other sister organizations for further treatment.

My organization exists to give hope to disadvantaged children/students in my community. We have about 300 students who reside both at the school and their home. We give them life skills that will enable them to have hope for the future. This shows the community around us that disability doesn't mean inability and it addresses the problem of stigma surrounding these persons. The community appreciates our services and gives us support in different ways to meet the needs of these persons.
