

I came to Coady to appreciate my inner leadership capacity by sharing experiences and learning, in order to positively support my organization and society.

Mavuto Kholowa

Water and Sanitation Hygiene Facilitator

Participatory Development Initiatives (PDI), Malawi

My responsibility is to lead and oversee the project's awareness and community mobilization strategy through participatory planning, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of activities. My work contributes towards the empowerment of marginalized and vulnerable members of society to live a healthier and improved life. This is done by supporting them in development interventions that lead to fewer health challenges, which helps encourage participation in development activities.

Participatory Development Initiatives (PDI) is a local Malawian NGO which strives to contribute towards transformation and development of people living in abject poverty by providing enabling situations that lead to greater self-development and empowerment. PDI empowers people through self-awareness interventions that trigger and ignite communities into action. The primary responsibility of PDI is to provide support in water and sanitation services to poor communities.
