

I want to keep my skills polished — specifically for a modern and sophisticated approach to the development of complex societies and to equip myself with better knowledge.

Zahoor Ahmad

Research fellow/assistant coordinator

Center for Public Policy Research (CPPR) Institute of Management Sciences, Pakistan

I am responsible for conducting quantitative and qualitative studies, developing research studies and technical methodology, enumerators' selection and training, managing field operations, data management and analysis and preparation of reports. I maintain a strong liaison with different stakeholders, including government, donors and communities.

CPPR strives to provide an academically rigorous and independent forum for research, dialogue, policy alternatives and technical assistance to the public and development sector. The center also provides empirical evidence for informed decision making, and responsive policy management practices in social, political and economic domains in the region. In doing so, the center is bridging the gap between state and citizenry for sustainable development initiatives.
