

I expect to gather enough knowledge in leadership to work with young unprofessional girls so they can unleash their full potential. I am also expecting to stay connected with other leaders to continue developing leadership assets.

Patricia Sugi

Associate Production Manager

Girl Effect, Rwanda

I manage the editorial team and work with young girls who produce the first youth brand 'Ni Nyampinga'. This is a platform where Rwandan girls who are between 10 and 19 get access to resources that help guide them to their full potential. Ni Nyampinga is not only a weekly radio show and the most quarterly distributed magazine in the country, but also a safe space for girls.

Girl Effect exists to create a new normal for girls, where behavior and social change is occurring at scale, contributing to girls becoming empowered. Empowerment means girls having agency - the ability to make decisions about their own lives and to act on them. This will enable girls to be educated, healthy, safe and economically empowered.
