

My training at Coady will help me harness new skills to invest in my foundation so we can better serve the youth of Botswana and Africa.

The foundation is in its infancy stage. We have recently been given an office and accommodated under the Botswana Institute for Development and Policy Analysis, in partnership with the Botswana Action 2015 team. Our daily activities include: drawing proposals and seeking partnerships and funding to fully implement our mandate; information dissemination on current news and issues that affect young people; and encouraging young people to be more proactive in holding their governments accountable.

The foundation is a youth-led and youth-focused research and advocacy think tank with the aim to help young people address their socio-economic challenges whilst also being the mechanism to evaluate the programs designed for them. The foundation aims to radically advance youth leadership, especially within Africa, by interlinking local, regional and international resources and opportunities. We also educate people about the possibilities of adopting vulnerable children within Africa.
