

“I came to Coady to enhance my leadership capabilities, to learn from experiences of other women leaders and to improve my skills in developing programs that will bring about sustainable economic development in my community.”

Yeukai Muzezewa

Project coordinator

Evangelical Lutheran Church in Zimbabwe, Bulawayo, Zimbabwe

As a coordinator of the malaria project, my main duties revolve around planning, organizing and monitoring activities on malaria prevention, and economic empowerment of communities affected by malaria. I am also responsible for creating stakeholder partnerships, managing human resources and monitoring project funds. My project works with community groups to raise awareness and advocate for healthy behaviours and practices. I promote savings and lending groups and small businesses to help empower the community economically.

Evangelical Lutheran Church in Zimbabwe is a church that helps alleviate human suffering and promotes life in abundance for all individuals. It works with marginalized communities by providing health care services, education institutions and life skills centres. The organization is also addressing community challenges through its HIV and AIDS project, malaria project, gender justice project and Diakonia projects. The church works with all individuals regardless of religious affiliation.
