Aga Khan Foundation in the Kyrgyz Republic, Kyrgyz Republic

As a health program officer I provide leadership, oversight and technical support in development and implementation of community health programming in target regions of the Kyrgyz Republic. In particular, I oversee the Central Asian Health System Strengthening and Community Based Health Promotion projects aimed to improve health in remote, rural communities with a special focus on women of reproductive age and children under five.

The Aga Khan Foundation is a private, international, non-denominational development organization. AKF aims to improve the socio-economic status of remote mountainous communities through complementary interventions in early childhood development, health, natural resource management and disaster risk reduction as well as enhancing local governance implemented in partnership with local government and communities.
